Police: Boy, 7, dead, 3 hurt after North Carolina Shooting

(AP) Charlotte police officers are being called back in from days off and vacations after five people have been killed and five others hurt in shootings during a violent Labor Day holiday weekend in North Carolina's largest city. The dead include a 7-year-old boy killed during a birthday party around 9 p.m. Saturday in a front yard in southwest Charlotte. Another child and two other adults were wounded, but their injuries were not life threatening, Charlotte-Mecklenburg Police Deputy Chief Jeff Estes said. "It's a sad state of affairs in the city and our country when a 7-year-old boy can't be free to celebrate a birthday party without being murdered," Estes said at a news conference Sunday. Police haven't identified suspects or a motive in Kevin Antonio Calderon Rodas' death. The other three fatal shootings this weekend also remain unsolved, Estes said. The sudden spate of violence led officials to call in officers from days off and vacation to help patrol and investigate, Estes said. He said the extra officers would be used to search for illegal guns, among other steps. "We think it is an absolute tragedy that in Charlotte-Mecklenburg we are seeing this type of violence," Estes said. "We will not rest or not stop until we do everything we can to put a stop to it." While officers investigated the boy's killing, authorities said they heard shots nearby about three hours later and found a woman dead and a man wounded from what appeared to be a drive-by shooting. Also over the holiday weekend, a man was found dead from gunshot wounds in east Charlotte on Sunday morning, and police found a man shot to death Saturday morning in northwest Charlotte after a second man was dropped off at the hospital where he died from gunshot wounds. "It is too early to say if any will be connected or not," Estes said. "I can tell you what connects them is it is a senseless, tragic loss of life."

International News – Significant Events

Migrants defy Hungary police lines

(BBC) Hundreds of migrants have broken through police lines on Hungary's border with Serbia and are walking towards the capital, Budapest. The migrants had earlier broken out of a registration camp at Roszke. About 300 are on a motorway, escorted by police. Some later reportedly agreed to be bussed to a reception center. Earlier, German Chancellor Angela Merkel warned that the "breathtaking" flow of migrants into Germany would change the country in the coming years. Hungary has become a flashpoint as thousands of migrants and refugees from the Middle East and Africa move north to claim asylum in Germany and other countries. The country's defense minister, Csaba Hende, resigned on Monday, reportedly over problems with the construction of a border fence meant to keep migrants out.

WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA AND CENTRAL COASTAL AREAS:

Eureka Weather:

Warming temperatures and drying conditions will continue through the week across the NW California interior. At the coast, seasonal temperatures and mainly clear skies will prevail.

Medford Weather:

The upper level ridge has set up overhead, and will remain in place, and intensify, over the next week. This will keep the area dry as the track of any waves within the westerly's will remain well to our north. Meanwhile, at the surface, the thermal trough will strengthen as well, producing dry offshore flow and warming temperatures, with today likely the strongest, creating periods of gusty offshore winds and very warm temperatures over far southwestern Oregon. The thermal trough itself will shift north Thursday, then slide inland Friday, and these will be the warmest days in the forecast, with temperatures reach up to 15 degrees above normal. This means several locations within the inland valleys west of the Cascades are likely to see triple digit highs Friday.

Reno Weather:

Strong high pressure will build over northeast California and western Nevada this week, leading to very warm and dry conditions. Afternoon highs will approach record levels toward the end of the week, with some cooling late in the weekend and early next week. Periods of smoke and haze will be possible from Mono County northward to Highway 50 due to the Rough Fire.

San Francisco Weather:

Very warm and dry conditions will continue through the week, with afternoon highs forecast to be up to 20 degrees warmer than seasonal norms. Late night low temperatures will remain relatively cool at lower elevations tonight, but gradual warm as the week progresses. The hottest days are expected to be Tuesday and Wednesday. Gradual cooling will begin near the coast by Wednesday or Thursday and then inland by Friday or Saturday.

WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

CENTRAL CALIFORNIA AND SOUTHERN SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY:

Sacramento Weather:

Strong high pressure will build overhead this week with dry northwest flow and subsidence. This will cause temperatures to rise, reaching levels 10-15 degrees above average for most locations. Today will likely mark the first in a string of four to five days with triple digit highs across the central valley. This will likely be the longest stretch this season of triple digit heat for the Sacramento region. Overnight lows will also be increasingly warm with the lack of any marine influence. Many locales in the thermal belts will struggle to fall below 70 degrees Thursday and Friday night.

Hanford Weather:

High pressure will continue to strengthen over the region through mid-week and bring mostly clear skies and much above normal temperatures to the area for the next several days.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA:

Los Angeles Weather:

Well above normal temperatures are expected this week due to a building ridge of high pressure, with Wednesday and Thursday likely being the hottest days. Cooling is likely by the weekend as the ridge of high pressure weakens. Remnant moisture from Hurricane Linda may bring isolated thunderstorms to the mountains and desert of eastern Los Angeles County on Tuesday and Wednesday.

Extreme Southwestern California including Orange, San Diego, Western Riverside and Southwestern San Bernardino Counties:

High pressure building over the region this week will create a very shallow marine layer and hot weather. Subtropical moisture from Tropical Cyclone Linda will create muggy weather, periods of clouds, and create the possibility of isolated to scattered heavy showers and thunderstorms in the mountains and low deserts in the afternoons through mid week. Little in the way of cooling or marine clouds can be expected until sometime next weekend when the high begins to weaken and onshore flow increases.

Southeast California Weather:

High pressure aloft will build northwest and become centered over the Mojave Desert through Saturday. This will result in above normal temperatures. Moist and unstable air will result in the potential for showers and thunderstorms today through Thursday mainly in the afternoon and evening hours south of Interstate 40. After mainly dry conditions on Friday and Saturday an area of low pressure approaching northern California may spark off an isolated shower or thunderstorm on Sunday in the higher elevations of the Mojave Desert.
